♦ INTO ♦ THE ♦ KENTUCKY ♦ HIGHLANDS. ♦

Very early in the morning, May 1st, our company left Lexington, taking the Lexington & Eastern Railway for Torment, en route to a mission school at Hazel Green. Mrs. Bourne, professor of English literature in Kentucky University, is Susie Sublette, state secretary of our organization in Kentucky, and the editor of the Tidings connected the company. All left Lexington with reluctance, for Doctor H. Willet was delivering a series of Bible studies and lectures in the Central Church, and it was difficult to go away from so helpful and enjoyable an opportunity.

Leaving Lexington, with its beautiful homes, we sped onward through the famous bluegrass country, pausing at Clay City, one of the centers of the mountain lumber trade. Beyond here we passed through Indian Fields, a broad, beautiful, upland valley, where the Indians made their last stand for their old Kentucky haunts and homes, from which they were driven by the countless and intrepid Daniel Boone and his associates.

From this point onward our way led through the canyon of the Red river, and was wonderfully beautiful and picturesque. Above the foot hills were rocky heights of fantastic form; here a castle, there a fort, beyond a monument standing out bold and distinct as the characters of the men who have made Kentucky famous. Each mile of the road brought us closer to the great masses of rocks, which in form, size and grouping were worthy of the greatest range of our continent, the Rocky mountains.

At Torment we reached the headwaters of the middle fork of the Red river, and the point at which we were to leave the railway. From here we were to drive 20 miles into the mountains to Hazel Green, so well known and loved by our sisterhood. The rain was falling in torrents when we left the train. We felt the little town was suitably and insufficiently named. It should have been in the plural and not in the singular form of the word.

We were met here by Judge Swango, of Hazel Green, who had brought to conduct us over the mountain road, the roughness of which we had so often heard, the best driver and the best team of the mountains. The driver was Noah, known to every man, woman and child between Torment and Hazel Green. Noah—you should know him—lives in a snug little ark, which is anchored safely in the beautiful valley in which Hazel Green is situated, so you see our Noah's ark did not land on Mount Ararat. Noah's team consists of four strong, well kept mules; their names are Kate, Mary, Ellen and Judy. They are wonderfully well cared for and trained to obey Noah's slightest word. When the road was narrowest, the cliffs the steepest and the ruts the deepest, Noah no longer said "Kate, Judy, Ellen or Mary," but in a voice of velvet softness, he called, "Come, babies, easy now, steady." They were the most obedient babies we have ever seen, responding to the gentlest word. You should have seen them. Their harness was strong but neat. Each mule wore a bright red tassel, ornamented with blue ribbons and a white ring. Each one also had a clear toned bell upon the collar and when we drove into the highland hamlets you may be sure we felt we were making a decided impression upon the community.

Our road wagon was built for the mountains and was well covered, so we were sheltered from the pouring rain—once we were within it. It had four seats. When we started from Torment we were accompanied by our friend Judge Swango, a traveling salesman, and a poet who was out of health, though lacking poetic fire, and was seeking restoration at the famous Swango springs. We were a merry company, but the responsibilities of the editor were heavy. The poet, though he had reached the autumn time of life, was alone and was seeking congenial company for his life's descending slopes, hence her duties as party chaperon were not light. When the road was roughest the poet would draw from his vest pocket a book of his poetic effusions and read to us of heaven, eternity or some kindred timely topic. Like the wedding guest in the Ancient Mariner, we

"We could not choose but hear." A Campton, half way to Hazel Green, we stopped for a rest and for dinner in the hospitable home of our church people, Mr. and Mrs. Combs. After the dinner, the poet treated us to another selection, and cheered, refreshed and fortified we resumed our journey.

We reached Hazel Green at 5 o'clock and were welcomed into the pleasant, comfortable home of Mr. and Mrs. Rose. The daughter of the house, a charming girl, united with her mother in making our visit happy and comfortable. Hazel Green is a pretty little village and is nestled cozily in a valley of the Red river. The highlands surround it on every side. In and about the village are the family homes of the Swangos, Days, Mizes, Roses, Kashes and others long known as friends of our school. The people of the community gave the representatives of our work a hearty welcome.

After supper we visited our school building, going through every part of it and inspecting it carefully. We think too much can not be said of the importance of having all Christian schools the expression of order, cleanliness and beauty. Here the best and highest ideal of community should be expressed. Wednesday evening being the regular time for the hour of prayer at the church, we attended. The room of our interest in them and our efforts in their behalf.

At the close of the chapel exercises a conference was held with a number of the citizens in the home of Mr. Rose. The future of the school was fully discussed, the difficulties and possibilities of the enterprise being fully recognized and canvassed. The conference was, we think, satisfactory to the citizens, Prof. Cord and the visiting representatives. In the afternoon the various building sites which have been proposed by the citizens were visited. At night a mass meeting of the students and citizens was held in the church, a social hour following the address given.

Bright and early Friday morning Noah and his team drove up to our Hazel Green home, which had truly been a home to us. We took our places in the wagon, except that the poet was not with us, and were photographed, in order that you might know Judge Swango, our guide and good friend, Noah, the prince of drivers, and his team, the best team in the mountains. Noah drove us around the village ere we left the valley and of the hills, and the twenty miles to Torment, over rocks, thro' gulches, into ancient ruts and mudholes which seem almost bottomless, close to the edges of cliffs, and under overhanging rocks, did not seem too long. Taking from Noah a promise that when we came again he and his team and no other, should carry us over the hills, we bade him good-bye. His good management enabled us to tarry in Torment an hour ere train time. This is a summer resort that should be much better known among our people. It is in charge of our sister, Mrs. Bettie Keller, of Carlisle, Ky., her son and her son-in-law, W. H. Howe. The hotel is situated in front of a natural amphitheater. The cliffs arise forming a perfect semi-circle. From the top of one overhanging cliff, 160 feet high, the water falls in a veil of mist into a pool below. Beneath this jutting cliff is a natural assembly room; here are seats for hundreds of people. Back of the water fall, with its music always sounding, ministers and literateurs may speak their messages if they are not hushed into silence by the wonderful beauty about them. The

was well filled with members of the church and students, and the service was a happy, helpful one.

The next morning we attended chapel exercises. The assembly room will not comfortably hold the pupils. The enrollment for this year is 120 in advance of any previous year, while the receipts of the school have very materially increased in spite of the lack of dormitory accommodations. Prof. Cord, his corps of teachers and the citizens of Hazel Green, are to be congratulated and commended for the efforts they have made this year. There are still other steps necessary, ere the school will reach the highest degree of usefulness, and we believe these will be taken. It was a bright, alert body of students that faced the visitors. Prof. Bourne gave them an inspiring address upon life's true victories. Every point she made was appreciated by her audience, and their enjoyment was most evident. Miss Sublette followed with a message from the sisterhood of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions, which clearly and beautifully gave to the young people a knowledge from the school and the many homes in which we had received a cordial welcome, came a hearty "Good-bye and God bless you." Our stay in Hazel Green could scarcely have been happier. The citizens, Prof. Cord and his assistants, Messrs. Smith and Cisco and Miss Crose, and the students also, had done all in their power to assist us in the object of our visit, as well as to make us comfortable and happy.

Across the Red river, past the beautiful old home and farm of the Swango family, and into the hills, we took our way. The sun was shining. The hills were as fair as a poet's dream. The dog-wood, wild crab-apple and wild plum trees were in blossom, and lifted their white and pink clouds of fragrant beauty against the green of the pine and hemlock. When the road narrowed we could lay our hands against the hillside, carpeted with mosses and starred with white, blue and yellow violets, anemones, hepaticas, mountain daisies and nodding columbines. Trusting to Noah's guidance we gave ourselves to the enjoyment rocks overhead are lichen covered and water stained. The colors are soft and harmonious. On either side, the walls of the amphitheater are hung with mountain laurel and rhododendrons. Two weeks later these will be in the height of their glorious beauty of full blossom. Every crevice holds a cluster of mountain daisies, a tuft of violets, or a coronet of maiden hair or feather fern. The air is full of the healing balsam of the pines and the hemlocks, and they murmur as musically in this basin of the Red river as in the basin of Minos in Arcadian valleys. The hour spent in Torment will make us stronger for work when its demands are heaviest. The train for Lexington speedily bore us back to the work-a-day world, but could not take from our hearts the vision of beauty we had won in the Kentucky highlands.

Visiting Lexington, Ky., our return from Hazel Green had the benefit of a conference with our Kentucky Board covering our schools at Hazel Green, Morehead.—Mrs. Moses, in Missionary Tidings, Indianapolis

It Dazzles the World.

No discovery in medicine has ever created one quarter of the excitement that has been caused by Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It's severest tests have been on hopeless victims of Consumption, pneumonia, hemorrhage, phthisis and bronchitis, thousands of whom it has restored to perfect health. For coughs, colds, asthma, skews, hay fever, hoarseness and gittin' looping cough it is the quick-like as a sure cure in the world. It is sold by J. Taylor Day, Hazel Green, and S. S. Combs & Son, Campton, who guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Large bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles were sent.

Send us $1.00 and record your name in our other—leastways about it, even this for our—box not in sight. Mirandy, so we heard, mented Mr. Burgess, with a shiver.

Do Wonder She Was Hot.

The lady story writer towered in the doorway. "Perhaps you take me for a writer of patent medicine advertisements," she sarcastically remarked to the startled editor. "I think not, madam," he managed to reply. "What seems to be the difficulty?" "I say you have not noticed it?" she asked. "What?" he asked. "I said, as she flung a glance of disdain at him. "The atrocious error in the chapter of my story, where the heiress discovers the perfidy of her spendthrift husband." "This is the particular point," he said, pausing and only, "I have not noticed it." "What?" she asked. "I said, as she flung a glance of disdain at him. "The atrocious error in the chapter of my story, where the heiress discovers the perfidy of her spendthrift husband." "This is the particular point," he said, pausing and only, "I have not noticed it."

to several hundred people who are not new subscribers to THE HERALD, and to all such we wish to say: Write your name on the subscription blank in the $15,000 premium offer, make your estimate of the total value of the states of Ohio, Massachusetts and Iowa, and with it enclose $1.00 for a year's subscription to THE HERALD. This, however, is not by any means a fair sample of what our paper will be during the coming year. Want of space in this issue forces us to eliminate much of the correspondence, the state news, general news comment, and the most relative stock sales report to be had.
Our paper is all printed at home, thus enabling us to have absolute control of our advertising columns as well as the news matter, and we shall strive in the future, as we have in the past, to make THE HERALD the best family paper published in Eastern Kentucky. It will contain many features not to be found in any other paper in this part of the state, and in all every respect will be worthy the support of every man and woman in the community. So, who today and record your name. You may get the $5,000. Who knows?
Anyway you have 100 chances to get your money back and the paper

THE WOMAN WHO TRUSTED. A story of Literary Life in New York. By Will N.
Harben, author of "Northern Georgia Sketches," etc.

As the sub-title suggests, this is a story of the struggles of a young literary man, and his success is finally brought about through the "Woman Who Trusted." The scene of the story and the main characters are of southern origin, and the story is a very absorbing one, indeed. The beautiful character of the heroine, the "Woman Who Trusted," holds the reader spellbound, and her faith in the young writer shows a character so foreign to the frivolity of the female sex in general as to make her really fascinating. The attempt of a society woman of wealth to ensnare the young man of brains into a marriage for money, and his unfaithfulness to his first love are fully portrayed by the author. It is on the whole, a most fascinating story and should be in the hands of all who like first-class fiction.
Henry Altman Co., Philadelphia, are the publishers, who have our thanks for a nicely bound volume of the story comprising 257 pages, bound in cloth and embellished in gold.

MONTAGNE, or the Slaves of Old New York. A historical novel by Wm. O. Stodlard, author of the "Life of Abraham Lincoln," etc. 326 pages, bound in cloth and gold, from the press of the Henry Altman Co., Philadelphia.

This is a story of New York City when it was in its infancy and just before it was evacuated by the British troops. It shows the mean traits in the character of the English aristocracy, the latent hatred of the native Indian for the Englishman, and gives a glimpse of the slave trade as then indulged in by the shrewd Yankee, who, while his conscience revolted at being engaged in selling human flesh, was nevertheless willing to profit by the traffic. The patriotic American citizen can not read this book without a feeling of hatred for both the British and the Yankee—the former for their mean, cowardly traits, and the latter for inaugurating a traffic of which they were to profit and afterward abandon and disclaim. The character of Dr. Montague and his faithful body servant "Sassago," an Indian, are true types of the American citizen of that time. This is a thrilling story of American bravery in the struggle for independence, and should be in the library of every true American citizen. The Henry Altman Co. has our thanks for a copy of this book, and we bespeak for it and the "Woman Who Trusted" a large sale. This company, by the way, is turning out many of the best literary productions of the country, and our literary friends should write them for a list of the latest.

The Ohio & Kentucky Railroad was Completed Wednesday, June 10th, 1901.

The new Ohio and Kentucky railroad was completed on yesterday, we understand, and will soon be in operation for freight and passenger traffic. This road opens up a large territory to Winchester and Lexington, and if the merchants of those places would combine and build a five mile trolley line from Sam Henry Wilson's on the Ohio & Kentucky rail road to Hazel Green, they could also get the trade of Grassy creek, Ezel, Maytown and Stillwater. With the trolley line in operation the people of these last named villages would come to Hazel Green and ride over it to the Ohio & Kentucky, which is only five miles away, and thence on to Lexington or Winchester. The people of those two places, and especially the former, are blind to their own interests if they fail to pool their purses and build this line. It would pay handsomely as an investment also, and the people of Hazel Green are willing to materially aid in the enterprise. Let us hear from Lexington on the subject.

Preconscious Pullit.

Some time during last March our better I had a hen to hatch out one chicken. In due course of time her henship set again, and the pullet she hatched at the first setting assisted her in hatching out the second brood, taking one or two or three eggs under her.
After the last brood was hatched this "little mother" was as solicitous for the welfare of her little sisters and brothers as was the mother hen, and would scratch for them just as zealously. During a storm she would always hover as many as she could protect, and in all other respects she evinces a parental devotion far superior to many human mothers. She is today a living witness of the fact that she battles for the young chicks and may be seen chaperoning some of the little chicks any time. Does any one know of a like incident?

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles.
Only 25c. Sold by J. Taylor Day, Hazel Green, or S. S. Coats & Son, Campton, drug stores.

A man in this county own a mule which was 33 years old on the 14th day of April past. He bought the mule when it was a suckling, from his father, who owned the mare which foaled it, for $25. It never has been sheared, either mane or tail, and it never had a shoe on hind feet. Thus, J.
Stamper, of the Stamper branch, is the man. The mule has been in his continuous possession all the time, and is still healthy and hearty and bids fair, judging from its suppleness to live out the half century any how.

LION COFFEE

LION COFFEE is not glazed or coated with egg mixtures and chemicals, but is an absolutely pure coffee, full of strength and flavor.

In every package of LION COFFEE you will find a fully illustrated and descriptive list. No housekeeper, in fact, no woman, man, boy or girl will fail to find in the list some article which will contribute to their happiness, comfort and convenience, and which they may have by simply cutting out a certain number of Lion Heads from the wrappers of our one pound sealed packages (which is the only form in which this excellent coffee is sold).
